Pitt Town Massive Market Day!

Ebenezer Church and Scots Church Pitt Town have historically been two churches, one congregation and still are today. Please note this upcoming event.

June 24: The highly anticipated Massive Market Day is coming and once again we are raising funds to build clean water wells in West Papua.

The poster features a white background with a red banner across the middle. At the top, there are four circular callouts: a green one for 'Tea Coffee & Cake Stall', a blue one for 'Sausage Sandwich, Egg & Bacon Rolls', a red one for 'Books & Plants', and a pink one for 'HUGE FRUIT & VEG STALL with lots of LOCAL PRODUCE'. The main title 'PITT TOWN'S MASSIVE' is written in large, colorful, block letters. Below it, 'MARKET DAY/ GARAGE SALE' is written in red, followed by 'SATURDAY JUNE 24' in large black letters. The location 'AT THE UNITING CHURCH, BATHURST ST' and the time '9AM - 2PM' are also included. A yellow callout at the bottom left says 'LIVE MUSIC + SINGING BY DANCERS & MORE!'. A black callout at the bottom right says 'FREE STALLS Book a spot & sell your garage items, books, clothes, old wares etc. "Your stall, your money" Take home what profit you make!'. A small photo of people at a well is in the bottom left corner, and a Facebook logo with the text 'Like us on Facebook' is in the bottom right. A red banner at the very bottom contains the mission statement and contact information.

Thoughts from Geoff

Yesterday morning Susan and I took our two dogs for their morning walk around the local creek in Toongabbie. It was one of those beautiful autumn mornings, warmer than expected. The sun slowly rose in the sky providing a gentle light. As we walked close to the creek with the sun in the background, the little valley glowed. The sunlight filtered through the trees and the creek was covered in a light haze that was beautiful. It really was breathtaking!

After a long weekend with services for Easter and other events in the life of our community I had felt the weight of busy-ness. As I walked through this lovely valley with gums and natives along the way I felt the weight of tiredness lift. The bird-song was beautiful and diverse. I can't name the birds but delighted in the sound of song and squawk. Our dogs wanted to chase the groups of ducks that wandered across the parkland and welcomed other dogs out for their walk. There were early morning exercisers walking, jogging or engaging in various activities in the park near the creek.

As I walked I found my breathing come easier. I hadn't even realised that my breathing was hard until it began to slow down and go deeper. I felt the pressure slide off somewhat and all around was the awareness of the Sacred, the Holy. The beauty of the world around me and the wonder of dogs, birds, trees, ducks and a creek with the sun shining gently from the blue sky, filled me with a sense of awe. When I look at such things I feel the Presence of God all around. It isn't something tangible that I can grasp and hold onto. It isn't something I can readily describe. It is an awareness that sometimes comes as a glimpse, a feeling, a tingle, a sense that the world is really good, despite the mess, stress and pain we experience and know exists.

When I stop to 'smell the roses' or look into the beauty of flowers in the garden or those along the way I see the world differently. Sometimes I find myself being caught up in the relentless flow of life and the expectations of people, society and even myself. I rush around and am sometimes filled with angst as I contemplate deadlines or challenges or difficulties. Often I feel overwhelmed by life and the struggle of so much of the world that I can do little, if anything about. In these moments I raise the expectations of myself, as if I can actually resolve the world's problems.

The flowers, our new puppy (and old dog), the ever-changing creek and the sun that rises each day and pushes the night away, all remind me that life is here, now and to be lived. There is beauty and wonder in the world and it points to God who holds all things in relationship and love. When I relax and rest in this Presence I find my levels of hope and inner peace grow stronger and I feel positive about life. It is in these moments that I realise I need to stop and ponder, reflect, listen and dream. It is somewhere between the little puppy that is always on the go with extraordinary energy (until he suddenly drops and sleeps before going again) and our old Labrador who takes life much more slowly. He comes for the morning wander, stopping as necessary to take in the smells and rest. He ensures he is around when food is available but then he drops and sleeps his way through much of the day or just taking in everything in his relaxed and stress-free manner.

In our fast-paced world with high expectations and demands, it is vital to be able to stop for a few moments of renewal and reorientation. I love an account in Mark's story of Jesus. He responded to the illness in his friend's Peter's relative and restored her health. All of the town and region flocked to the house after hearing it was him and what he did. They brought everyone who had so much as a sore toe to see what this guy could do. He eventually fell into bed and slept. Early in the morning Jesus got up and went into the hills to pray and reorient himself in the way of God. His disciples came searching and when they found him urged him to come back because there was a huge crowd looking for him. This equated to stress, pressure and success. This could have been the beginning of a new mission or vocation or operation. It could have been highly successful and very popular. Jesus could have made it in Galilee and beyond and set himself up – the healer fixing everyone and everything. The disciples obviously saw the possibilities and upped the pressure.

Jesus, somewhat surprisingly, told them that they were going on to the next town. He came to tell people about the Reign of God that is about justice, peace and inclusive new life in the love and grace of God. He didn't come to heal. I suspect that it was in his stopping and praying that he remembered his mission, what was really important and found direction, strength and the grace to move in the next direction.

When I am able to stop I often find myself wondering why I am doing what I am doing and asking what is really important. I find a reorientation of life and a slowing down that allows me to value what is before me and life in the moment that exists now.

Yesterday morning was a reminder that God is God and I should slow down a little and appreciate the beauty and wonder that is ever-present around me. I pray that you will be able to find the same space to breathe more deeply and experience wonder and grace in the Presence of God who holds us in love.

Something to ponder...

The Last Wishes of Alexander the Great

On his death bed Alexander the Great summoned his generals and told them his three ultimate wishes:-

1. The best doctors should carry his coffin:
2. The wealth he had accumulated (gold, money, precious stones etc) should be scattered along the procession route to the cemetery:
3. His hands should be let loose, hanging outside the coffin for all to see:

One general who was surprised by these unusual requests asked Alexander to explain. Here is what Alexander the Great had to say:

1. I want the best doctors to carry my coffin, to demonstrate that, in face of death, even the best doctors in the world have no power to heal.
2. I want the road to be covered with my treasures, so that everyone sees that material things acquired on earth stays on earth.
3. I want my hands swinging in the wind so that people understand that we come into the world empty handed and we leave this world empty handed, after the most precious treasure of all is exhausted: TIME.
4. We do not take to our grave any material wealth. TIME is our most precious treasure, because it is LIMITED. We can produce more wealth, but we cannot produce more TIME.
5. When we give someone our time, we actually give a portion of our life that we can never take back. Our TIME is our LIFE !!!
6. So therefore the best present that you can give to your friends and family is your TIME. May God grant you plenty of TIME and may you have the wisdom to give it away so that you can LIVE, LOVE and DIE in peace.

Alexander the Great (356-323 BC) was only 33 when he died of a fever, which he contracted in India near the Ganges River. He was a pupil of Aristotle and ascended to the throne on the murder of his father in 336 BC. He was King of Macedonia and conqueror of an empire that covered much of Asia, and included parts of Africa and India. Alexandria in Egypt gets its name from Alexander.

In 13 years he accomplished, perhaps more in this regard, than any other in history.

Who was Albert Brown?

The speaker at the Ebenezer Church pilgrimage on Sunday 18 June will be Peter Worland, Executive Director, Uniting. On that occasion Peter Worland will be bringing a silver cup that was presented to Albert Brown in January 1900 by the congregation of Ebenezer Church.

The cup has been in the family of John Cahill, a neighbour of Peter Worland, for many years and the family would now like the cup to be returned to the church which they feel is its rightful place.

So ... who was Albert Brown?

In March 1850 James Dawbney Brown, a student of ministry under Presbyterian minister Rev. John Dunmore Lang, arrived in New South Wales. In June 1851, he married Sarah Hopkins, eldest daughter of William Hopkins, the proprietor of Hopkins' flour mills and bakery in Windsor.

James Brown opened a successful and popular private school in Windsor but later turned to farming.

In the 1864 Hawkesbury flood James, his wife and four children, passed a night in an improvised second storey in a one-storey house over the rising floodwaters at a farm at Freeman's Reach. In the morning a rescue boat removed all to a place of safety. The youngest of those four children was Albert Brown who at that time would have been two years of age.

In his adult life Albert Brown was a farmer and owned land between Coromandel Road and Sackville Road, Ebenezer. Albert and his wife were highly respected in the Ebenezer community, Albert being called upon to chair community meetings. He must have been an accomplished singer as he was often asked to perform at concerts and weddings.

More on Albert Brown at the church anniversary on Sunday 18 June.

A Lighter Moment

My wife said, "What are you doing today?"

I said, "Nothing".

She replied, "But you did that yesterday."

I replied, "I know that dear but I haven't finished."

A celebrity went to pay a charity visit to an Aged Facility, to cheer up the residents. But he was disappointed that none of them seemed to recognise him, instead they all looked mystified. Finally he went up to one lady and asked, "Do you know who I am?"

The old lady whispered, "Don't worry dear, Matron will tell you."
